We can name it as the world's most trending community coin as it promises on some serious aspects like that of improved transactions, good speed and fun nature. Mango man is hyper deflationary coin with static reflection which rewards holders, therefore, more Mango man coins are automatically added to the wallet each time transaction is made. In actual, The cryptocurrency world took off last year, that is, 2020. The total market capitalization of all cryptocurrencies now, in 2022, exceeds $1.6 trillion. It is estimated that there are over 300 million crypto users worldwide. In this new report we'll share the biggest trends in the crypto space happening right now (in 2022). Those that are likely to continue through 2025 and beyond:

1. Institutional Adoption Of Crypto Ecosystem

Financial institutions and large corporations have traditionally viewed the cryptocurrency ecosystem with skepticism. Today, many institutions are actively allocating capital to this area. Nowhere has this become more apparent than the asset management industry. By the end of 2020, $15 billion of institutional assets under management had been allocated to the crypto asset class. This is compared to just over $2 billion at the end of 2019 (a 5 times increment).

While this amount is still peanuts compared to the overall asset management industry, future regulatory clarity could help in boosting this number.

2. DeFi Powers More Use Cases

Almost nothing has drawn more attention in the crypto community last year than the advent of DeFi (Decentralized Finance) applications. The concept basically involves traditional financial transactions that take place on the blockchain. These transactions are typically enabled by the use of smart contracts. And, unlike traditional payments or transfers, they avoid the need for financial intermediaries altogether. DeFi transactions usually range from traditional lending to the creation of derivatives. And growth in the DeFi space is only just beginning. DeFi Pulse reports that the Total Value Locked (TVL) – a measure of the total value of cryptocurrencies that are committed to a smart DeFi contract – grew from $2 billion to $15 billion in 2020.

And 2021 has brought unprecedented growth. Since the beginning of last year, the TVL more than doubled to just under $100 billion. One of the most popular recent DeFi applications has been yield farming .Yield farming involves lending crypto assets to other platforms in return for interest or new cryptocurrencies . On the surface, yield farming very is similar to digital banking. Users deposit their crypto assets in a pool of funds and receive interest on those assets . In many cases the depositor is staking a new crypto platform. And will receive a new crypto asset in return for the liquidity he or she provides. In our low interest rate environment, yield farming platforms have received notable attention because of the higher rates they can offer to depositors.

3. NFT Tokenizes Everything

One of the most interesting developments in the crypto space is the rise of non-fungible tokens (NFTs).These tokens basically represent digital claims to a unique thing or asset . The item they represent can be digital or physical. Fungible tokens – like bitcoin – do not necessarily represent any claim to an asset or physical thing. They can be traded and divided into smaller pieces. NFTs, on the other hand, represent claims to things like domain names, physical or digital artwork, collectibles, and video game add-ons.Typically, created on the ETH blockchain, most NFTs have imbedded smart contracts that describe the digital or physical product they represent. And, for the most part, they are not divisible like fungible tokens (though that is changing). Because of the fragmented nature of this market, it is difficult to estimate the total size. But we can get a general idea by looking at individual NFT platforms.Some estimates have placed monthly NFT trading volume at around $15 million in October 2021. That number is likely to grow, however, as the market value Ethereum’s NFT sector grew to $33 million from $3 million just in the month of January.

4. Regulation Is Unavoidable

2021 was the year of increasing regulatory clarity in the crypto market.The 2017 ICO craze ushered in an era of increasing government scrutiny. And legal questions over the nature of cryptocurrencies themselves have continued to confound regulators. The Ripple case illustrates this trend well. In late 2020, the Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC) brought a case against Ripple Labs alleging the company offered approximately $1.3 billion in unregistered securities when it sold much of its XRP cryptocurrency to the public.
